IPI introduces our One Step construction loan. Great rates. Zero points. Single closing.

At IPI, we understand just how difficult it can be to buy land and to build your dream house. Typically, you'd start with a short-term land loan, then go to a construction loan and finally an "end loan" or conventional mortgage. And typically, you'd pay points or fees every step of the way. Not to mention the aggravation of separate closings.

Not anymore. IPI is proud to announce our One Step construction loan. It's the only zero-point, single-closing land/construction/end loan available that is underwritten entirely on site in our Main Street, Bridgehampton office. This comprehensive program offers you a single interest rate for all three phases of your project, from beginning to end. And most important, IPI locks in your interest rate—in advance, at no additional cost—for 12 months, not for 60 days like other brokers or banks.

We can offer innovative programs like our One Step construction loan because we've consolidated our loan officers, processors, underwriters and closers under one roof. Our experienced mortgage professionals represent more than 100 preferred lenders, so we can find the best possible program at the best possible price for you. And because IPI is the largest mortgage broker in the Northeast, you get the best of two worlds: New York big and Hamptons local.

IPI Mortgage

At IPI, we hammer out all the details of our One Step construction loans up front — so you don't get hammered by unnecessary fees.

Featherbed Blowout

CAVEAT EMPTOR (BUYER BEWARE)

Don't be misled by advertisements for European goose down comforters allows the down to give you maximum loft without collecting in one section at supposedly "SALE PRICES". We'll show you that most of those ads do not represent good values at all. Just because these advertisements are from major departments stores - do not be fooled-all down is not alike.

The quality of goose down is measured in fill power (also know as loft). Fill Power is the amount of cubic inches one ounce of down will fill. Our 800 plus Siberian Goose Down will fill between 800 and 850 cubic inches of space. "The Company Store" catalog always lists the fill power of their goose down. Bring in their catalog and we'll generally save you 50% off their Goose Down Comforters are an investment, with proper care a fine quality comforter will last a life time. Our high quality 100% cotton shells, or tickings, are divided into baffle boxes. The baffle box has a mesh channel separating the top from the bottom of the comforter. The baffle of the comforter. We do not cater to the consumer that is more interested in price than quality. Our most valuable asset is our customer. We will only sell a product that we believe to be the highest value at the best price. Cheap low quality down should fill garage cans not pillows and comforters. All our goose down pillows and comforters contain 100% goose down even though it is legal to combine 70% down and 30% feathers and label the item 100% goose down. Remember feathers are those things with quills, down is similar to tiny balls of cotton, absolutely no hard quill. Our goose down comforters and pillows are machine washable because they only contain down.

The larger the individual down cluster the higher the fill power. The higher the fill power the better the comforter will insulate thus providing more comfort to you. Since you are spending 1/3 of your life in hed it should be as luxurious as possible. - Why not?

Rudy 1, Us 1

A Great Dane Going For The Gold, Tries To Outwit Some Humans In East Hampton

By Dan Rattiner

In the constant struggle of man vs. nature, I would like to report on two incidents that took place over the weekend in East Hampton. On one side were five adults, myself, Cathie, Misha, Natasha and their daughter, Masha. On the other side was Rudy, the Great Dane. When the weekend was over, I think it was fair to say that the score was one to one, a tie. There would be no overtime.

First of all, a little bit about the rules. If the adults are able to get into the car and drive away without the dog, the adults win. If the Great Dane either won't let the adults leave the house, won't let the adults leave the driveway, or winds up being all wedged in with all the adults and luggage in our small sedan then she wins. The dog wants to go. We want her to stay. From a human being's perspective, it's been a humbling weekend.

The first encounter took place on Saturday night around 8 p.m. Our teenagers had been fed and were either on their computers or watching TV. One of them had a friend over and Cathie and I decided to take Misha, Natasha and Masha out for dinner. Transplanted Russians, they are New Yorkers now; they were our weekend guests.

"Let's go to that Italian restaurant in Sag Harbor that has the Chianti bottles hanging from the it Cathie shouted, "Don't let the dog out," to ceiling." Cathie said.

"That's Il Cappuccino" I said.

"I've never been there," Cathie said. "And I've heard it's the most romantic spot there is."

"That's a great idea," I said.

You'll be hearing the name Rudy a lot in the my car was another car. It was owned by a friend everyone within earshot. Rudy was right there of course, wanting to join us. But with various shoving and pushing and blocking, we were able to get out the door and close it behind us.

We piled into the car and then I saw that behind of the teenagers. I did think that with the width of the driveway and the grass on either side, I could get around fairly easily. But, I underestimated the manners of the car owner.

Our front door suddenly burst open and there he was in shirt and sweater, his keys in his right hand, smiling at us and running out toward his car.

"I'll back out," he said. Behind him was Rudy. The collective groan went through everyone in my car. Misha and company are frequent visitors.

"You let the dog out," Cathie screamed. The young man looked puzzled.
"I'll just move it," he said.

And he did. Meanwhile, Rudy ran around the car, jumping up and down playfully (imagine a horse jumping up and down playfully). And it was clear to all of us that if we were to back out and go down the street now, she'd follow us at full rest of this article. Rudy is the name of the Great Dane who has come to us with championship stock and whose real name is Rudolf Tuxedo. For those familiar with Danes, she's a harlequin, the best around. On her hind legs, Rudy stands close to seven feet tall; she weighs 160 pounds. She is loyal to Cathie and will do almost anything to be with her. It's an interesting twist on the rules of the LeRoy Neiman - many of you will remember his work in Playboy – is celebrating the publication of his book, Catalogue Raisonne at the Hammer Gallery on West 57th Street. The book will feature his sports art. The story goes this facet of Neiman's oeuvre got a boost when the artist once went on the sidelines at a Chicago Bears game and started to sketch the action. He was about to be removed from the field, but Bears coach George Halas got a look at the drawings and ordered Neiman to be left alone.

Martha Stewart's K-mart collection of outdoor furniture temporary replaced - for a day - the usual decor at Restaurant Daniel. Ms. Stewart is giving a lunch to sendoff this new line for summer. Chef M. Boulard served vegetarian cuisine.

Meanwhile...Ms. Stewart is having no little problem with the New York State Tax Department, who says Martha falsely claimed residency in Connecticut in 1991-92 but her primary residence was, in fact (no surprise), East Hampton. She was, of course, trying to avoid paying New York State taxes - $221,667 worth. (Think of how much you'd have to spend to be taxed that much.) She recently lost a decision by the New York State Division of Tax Appeals. It is likely she will initiate another appeal.

PR powerhouses Peggy Siegel and Lizzie Grubman are reportedly talking about merging their firms. Siegel has been able to corner media personalities such as Mike Wallace, Tom Brokaw, Walter Isaacson and Charlie Rose to show bizopenings and Ms. Grubman has made amazing inroads in the music business, with clients such as Quincey Jones, Madonna, and Jay-Z. Whether they tie the knot or not, the two ladies will join forces to put together a premiere at the Museum for Modern Art for the screening of the HBO film If These Walls Could Talk.

Al Gore has named Robert Zimmerman to his New York State Steering Committee as a managing chair. Zimmerman is a longtime local political and community activist. Gore's New York State Director Eric Eve said, "Robert's activities in New York demonstrate the growing support that Al Gore has enjoyed in the past several months.

"Roadbabe" hits the road. Sag Harbor's Eva Morris, who goes by the aformentioned moniker and bills herself as a premier creator of "Erotic Automotive Journalism," just read from her work at The Cigar Bar in Sag Harbor last weekend ("a reading designed to entertain local fisherman," her press release notes), at Cornell University on Valentine's Day and at the NYU New School Tishman Auditorium two days later. Ms. Morris' fiction debuted in Penthouse in 1994. She says she has sold 33,000 copies of a self-published collection of her erotica and is currently featured in Susie Bright's Best American Erotica 2000.

speed. She's gone up to a half a mile before we have relented and let her in the car in the past, fearful for her safety on the road or that she might get a heart attack. But Cathie had an idea.

"Everyone wait here," she said.

She got out of the car and slammed the door shut, said "Thanks for everything, it's been great!" and ran into the house, Rudy running in behind her. Inside she apparently came to a sudden stop and Rudy skidded past her, realized her mistake, but it was too late. Cathie was back out the door and into the car, with the door slamming behind were made for Misha and company to be on the 8:15 p.m. Jitney from East Hampton. It was the last bus. If they missed that, they'd be in trouble the next morning.

It's only five minutes from our house to the bus stop, and at ten minutes to eight it seemed that everyone was all bundled up against the cold and ready to go.

"We're early," I said. "We should wait another ten minutes.

Nobody seemed in any hurry to take off their outer clothes, however.

"We can talk here for ten minutes," Cathie said. "Or we can talk at the bus stop for ten minutes. We might as well go."

Everyone concurred. Out of the corner of my eye door. Then she trotted into the study where I knew she would take up a position out of sight but only about seven feet away from the door. The issue for her of course, was whether or not Cathie was going. If it were just me and Misha and Company and Cathie stayed, he wouldn't even try and leave.

But here we were the five of us heading toward the door, me in the lead, Cathie directly behind. I opened the door slightly and began to wedge myself out with the blocking team behind us and Rudy was out onto the lawn like a shot. She went to the car. She sat down on the grass. Cathie turned

"She's not gonna fall for the same trick we pulled yesterday," she said. "We've got to think of something different."

With the front door open, the five of us debated the matter. I shut the door so Rudy couldn't hear. We had a plan. What Rudy saw was just two people come out the door, myself and Cathie. "Goodbye, goodbye," we said to the others. They waved and shouted goodbye and we closed the front door and skipped out to the car. Rudy leaped into the back seat, I got in the drivers seat and Cathie in the passenger seat, and Rudy started licking Cathie's ear. "We're going somewhere," Cathie shouted happily. "Oh boy, were going on a ride."

And we backed out the driveway and roared down the street and went around the block.

"Well, wasn't that a great movie," Cathie said. I yawned. "It's good to be coming home," I said.

"Yes, that was fun," Cathie said. We pulled back into the driveway. Both Cathie and I got out, leaving both doors open and we walked toward the house. Rudy wouldn't budge. She stared at us from inside the car.

"Sh-t." Cathie said.

Back in the house, we plotted some more. Meantime, out the window I could see Rudy slowly climb out of the car and assume a sitting position adjacent to it. She was awaiting developments.

"I could stay home," Cathie said.

"Don't be silly," I said. "We'll figure this out, we've still got time." I looked at my watch. It was 8 o'clock. We had fifteen minutes.

"What if we just leave?" Cathie said.

"Rudy will run alongside," I said. "How about, Cathie, you go out and put Rudy in your car and tell the boys to let her out after we've gone?"

"I don't know if she'll buy that," Cathie said. A fire was going in the fireplace, the living room was hot, and we were beginning to sweat. "Well, I'll give it a try," Cathie said. And she ran outside, we closed the door behind her and waited. In three minutes she was back, breathless.

"She wasn't buying it," she said. "She's still out

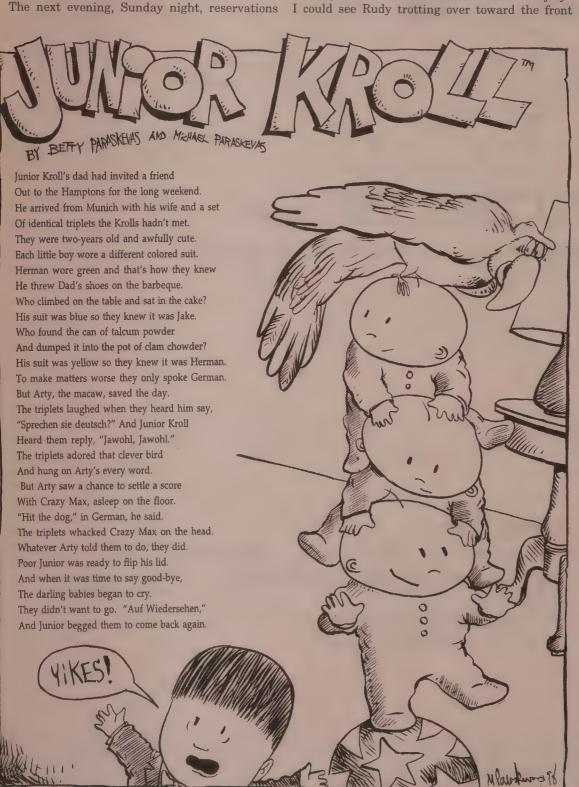

"How much time do we have left?" Misha asked. "We have about three minutes before we have to leave," I said. "We'll have to take her with us," I said.

"Will we all fit?" Natasha asked.

"No choice," I said.

Grimly, in silence, I opened the door and the five of us and all the luggage came out to the sedan. Rudy, sitting on the ground, looked at us and continued to wait. We all climbed in, me and Cathie in the front, Misha, Masha and Natasha wedged in the back and still Rudy looked warily at the situation. We had to go.

How To Make A Million Dollars While Doing Absolutely Nothing

By Dan Rattiner

I got a fax the other morning that was a brilliant piece of marketing. Some of my friends got it as well. It was a single piece of paper with two big boxes on it. One of them had a NO in it, the other a YES. Across the top were some stars and stripes surrounding the word VOTE, and below it was a headline.

SHOULD PUBLIC EXECUTIONS BE TELEVISED? it read.

Below the NO box in small print, it said Fax to 1-900-370-3200. And below the YES box it read Fax to 1-900-680-3200.

YOUR VOTES WILL BE PRESENTED TO ALL MAJOR TV NETWORKS – ABC, NBC, CBS, CHANNEL 5, CHANNEL 11 AND NETWORK AFFLIATES. THE TOTAL VOTES RECEIVED WILL

BE AVAILABLE AT THE END OF THE POLL AT WWW.POLL-RESULTS.COM. CALLS TO THESE NUMBERS COST $2.95 PER MINUTE, A SMALL PRICE FOR GREATER DEMOCRACY. CALLS TAKE APPROXIMATELY 1 OR 2 MINUTES. YOUR VIEWS ARE IMPORTANT. WE MAKE SURE THAT DECISION MAKERS ARE HEARING THEM!

There was some discussion on this sheet about the pros and cons of televising executions. An eye for an eye?

Revenge can be bittersweet but do we need to witness it? Should TV networks be allowed to provide you with a bird's eye view of the spectacle of death? Please make copies of this form and pass them to friends and colleagues.

Death by electric chair or by lethal injection; I don't know. It seems boring.

Whoever had done this had thought of almost everything.

If you didn't have a fax machine, for instance, you could mail your vote to 21st Century Faxes Ltd, 532 La Guardia Place, PMB 201, New York, New York 10012, and even though they wouldn't be getting $2.95 for the phone call, they'd see to it you were included.

There was an 800 number (no cost to you) which you could call to be removed from the mailing list of future polls.

Or, if you didn't want to burden them with the cost of the cancellation, there was another number – 646-602-0372 – you could call where you would pay the phone charge.

My first thought on getting this fax was wow, what a great and simple way to get my opinion out. My second thought was that what this really was was an intellectual way to make a lot of money without doing any work. Set it up, go lie in the park near La Guardia Place, go home and see how much money came in. 1000 faxes would bring in about $4,000.

With the phone company taking about $400 of it, there was still $3,600 left. And you didn't even have to take the time to sort the faxes. All the no's came in on one fax machine, all the yeses came in on another.

What a great American-style way to make a few

Who was this wonderful person? LaGuardia Place is a residential part of Manhattan right in the student district of NYU. The 646 area code was the new Manhattan area code what with the 212 area code all filled up, so what I imagined was that this was a newcomer to NYU, possibly a freshman or a first year graduate student who'd come up with a scheme to make his tuition. They'd be majoring in economics or business, of course.

I tried the 800 number and a polite recorded male voice with an English accent explained which buttons I should push to get my fax machine out of the loop. I didn't push any buttons and waited, hoping somebody might eventually pick up. But nobody did.

Next I tried the 646 number (it is 646-602-0372) but it was just a repeat of the same thing. I wasn't going to be able to speak to anybody.

I wondered who this Englishman was, but I wasn't going to know. Short of going to the address and ringing doorbells which I was not going to do – what was this, an obsession? – that was about as far as I was going to be able to take it.

Right or wrong, a college student is what I was left with. A college student it would be.

Finally, I've been left puzzling about the question itself. SHOULD PUBLIC EXECUTIONS BE TELEVISED? Presuming that the person being executed committed a heinous crime, yes, if it's death by firing squad as it is out in Utah, or death by hanging as it is in a dozen other states. That might be interesting to see, sort of like the FOX programs The Wildest Police Chases or The World's Worst Airplane Disasters.

Death by electric chair or by lethal injection; I don't know. Seems boring. Maybe I should make copies and vote several times, sometimes YES, sometimes NO.

Finally, I wondered if my assessment of the maker of this promotion really was a college kid.

What did he mean PUBLIC executions? The only PUBLIC executions I know of are off in countries run by dictators, where the crowd gathers in the soccer field stadium, and the condemned, one or more, are wheeled out on wooden carts, their hands tied behind their backs and around a wooden post to await their fate. The crowd roars.

A nifty, together college student would not have used the word PUBLIC at all. He or she would have simply written SHOULD EXECUTIONS BE TELEVISED? Not SHOULD PUBLIC EXECUTIONS BE TELEVISED.

A foreign exchange student? Maybe not a student car.

And Rudy leaped in the front seat like a bullet. Well, as much like a bullet as a small horse might, and she went diving between the two front seats and into the back where she wedged herself between Natasha and Masha and flattened herself sideways against the back seat so that they had to move to the inside of the doors and kind of lean back against her. Her eyes twinkled and she looked very happy and her tail thumped.

"Are we ready?" I asked. Everyone grunted and we slammed the doors and I drove down to the Jitney stop. It was a situation that reminded me of jamming college kids into phone booths.

We arrived at the Jitney stop on Main Street and pulled over to the curb, just in time to see the lights of the bus coming from the far end of town. In a minute the bus pulled into the stop and a dozen or so people got out of their cars to begin the loading process. In the back seat Misha, Masha and Natasha were untangling themselves, getting their luggage and backpacks. The back door opened.

"Don't let Rudy out." I said. Cathie turned to

"Rudy is not going anywhere," she said.

And indeed, she wasn't. She sat perfectly still as everyone muscled around her and got out. I got out on the driver's side, gentleman that I am, and accompanied our friends down to the bus about twenty yards away. Half way there Natasha stopped.

"Where's my bag?" she asked. "I've left my bag."
Misha and Masha continued on to make sure there was room on the bus but Natasha wasn't going anywhere.

"I left my bag," she shouted back at Cathie, who of course had remained back in the car. I could see Cathie at the car looking under the seats and around the back and on every side of Rudy.

"It's not here," she shouted to us. "You must have left it at the house."

"Oh, my God," Natasha said, softly. The bus was now almost fully loaded.

"What's in it?" I asked.

"Everything," Natasha said. "My money, identification, everything."

"We'll find it back at the house," I said. "And we'll pack it up and take it down to the Jitney tomorrow morning and they'll take it to the city."

"You sure?" Natasha said.

"No problem, we'll put it in a box. Nobody will take the money or anything. You will have to go down and meet the bus at 86th Street."

Natasha looked at the car, then she looked at the bus. "OK" she said. Then she ran to the bus and climbed on board. I returned to the car and drove away.

It had been a tremendous victory for Rudy and she knew it. I made a left at Town Pond and then another left in front of Guild Hall and we passed the bus going the other way and waved.

At that, Rudy stood up in the back seat to look out the window at what we were waving at. In doing so, she revealed what she had been sitting on. I think you know.

I Asked A Tree In Bridgehampton How It Was And He Told Me (So What?)

By Dan Rattiner

I have a confession to make. There was a time not so long ago, that I had an ongoing conversation with a tree. It was not just any tree, but this absolutely splendid, sixty-foot high copper beech tree that was in the back yard of the house that I had bought in Bridgehampton. It towered over the house; in fact, it towered over just about all the rest of town. Its trunk was thirteen feet around and I was told the tree was probably one hundred years old and it would live maybe a hundred years after I died, which led me to wonder exactly who owned who and whether it was even possible for humans to own such magnificent things as trees of this sort. This was the topic of the first conversation I had with this tree; maybe the tree

I vividly remembered one particular discussion I had with this tree - oh, this is so embarrassing to even talk about - in which we discussed whether or not the tree felt bad that it had never walked down by the ocean. Indeed, the tree could see the ocean. I climbed near the top once and it was a fabulous view but we were four miles inland on Lumber Lane. The tree had been planted there is so realistic that when a phone rings on television and rooted there and it had staked its claim there you pick one up.

It made me wonder what it would be like to be this big tree, just rooted to one spot...

> and it would never, never know what it was like to get sand under its feet. It would never dive through a wave or towel itself off and lie down on a beach blanket and take a nap. In fact, the tree would never sleep at all. Or else it was always sleeping, I really couldn't be sure. The tree wasn't giving much feedback in these conversations.

I hadn't thought about the tree in a while, but recently I was reading about the Time-Warner and AOL merger, about the Internet where you can click on a button and get a coupon printed out good for a box of Corn Flakes, about the new television technology and DVD where everything

> It made me wonder what it might be like if we were all like this big tree, just rooted to one spot, not going places but ordering things and having them delivered, exchanging messages with friends, playing video games and watching movies without ever leaving a seat in your living room. (Some people ARE living this way already.) It might be interesting to predict this future where everybody stays in one spot, rooted so to speak like that great copper beech tree in my back yard. Would it be so bad? I mean where was it written than everybody we know had to be going from point A to point B every day from JFK to LA, from Islip to Florida, from LaGuardia

I mean there are a lot of species that have arms and legs and so forth and don't move more than a few hundred feet from one spot during the course of their lives. And then of course, there is the mighty copper beech and the royal oak and the sequoia out in California and all of them have a life span far longer than we humans do.

In case you haven't noticed, moving around is dangerous. Why haven't we noticed? Oh, there's a traffic jam at exit 53, a tractor trailer truck turned over and there's a Chevy Geo squashed under it. Did you here what happened to the Perkins, killed in that plane crash? Well, we all have to go sometime.

Well, we really all don't have to go anymore. We can sit home and if we want to feel what it's like to be on safari in Africa, we can watch one on videotape. If we want to feel what it was like to be on the Titanic, we can rent the movie. There's no danger of being run over by an elephant or eating something that could give you ameobic dysentery. Want to know what it's like on an F-16 fighter jet? In fact, they already have that now; you can go to fairs and carnivals and they have these boxes that rattle you back and forth, and at the end, instead of yelling "May Day, May Day" and going down in flames, you get out and whack yourself on the head a couple of times and go on to the next ride.

just stayed in one place. You wouldn't have to worry about them widening the Long Island Expressway.

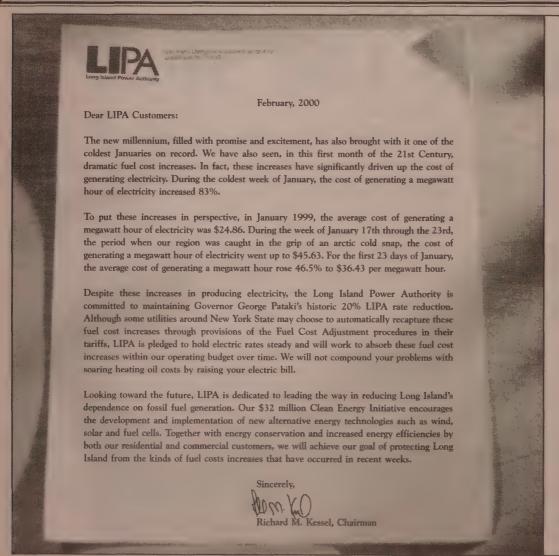

In fact, you wouldn't need a Long Island Expressway or any other road. You could roll up all the roadbeds and plant grass. Want to visit Buckingham > Palace in a simulation where you can walk through every room and if you want, pick up the whole palace and just shake all the people out of it? You wouldn't need airports, you wouldn't need train stations, all you would need is a bunch of telephone wires and TV cables and satellite dishes to link everything up everywhere.

> Of course, there's one big problem. Sex could be a problem. Oh, we could find ways to stimulate ourselves with videotapes and gadgets and we already have that stuff available at your local video store anyway. And if changes happened in evolution real fast, we might just die out. We'd have to figure a new way to reproduce; raise our arms, shake our fingers and have little sperms fly out and be carried by the wind, heading for

Just think what life would be like if we ALL the nearest female. I don't know, I think maybe I ought to go back and have another talk with that copper beech.

Bridge Collapses

Section Of Old Sag Harbor Bridge Collapses While New One Is Being Built

By Jerry Cimisi

We got the call at the office Thursday morning: the Sag Harbor Bridge has collapsed, the caller

, Now this wasn't entirely unexpected. The Sag Harbor-North Haven Bridge, built in 1936, was being taken down section by section and a new one being put in its place. But the work, begun last year, had had its problems. Last autumn a crane collapsed on the bridge and early this winter it was noticed that the bridge was settling. Up to this point traffic had been allowed on one lane of the bridge while the other side was being worked on. After that no cars - and no pedestrians - were allowed on the bridge.

Associate editor Steve Braverman and I raced to Sag Harbor. As we got to the town everything looked normal and we had the thought we had been hoaxed. Indeed, as we reached the bridge and parked nearby, the bridge, half demolished did not seem to present us with anything untoward.

collapse," he said. "We just had a fire in the laborers shack."

The small dwelling in which the workers stored various items and ate their lunches had plainly suffered a fire, apparently caused by a gas leak in proximity to an electric heater.

But just as we were concluding this was the only

A few people in Sag Harbor were thinking the same thing. In its coverage of the incident, Newsday quoted Mayor Bill Young expressing his concerns that, after the collapse of the crane and the settling of the bridge and now this, the construction of the new bridge might not be as safe as the village had been assured.

mishap at the bridge, we walked to another vantage point and spoke to another worker eating his lunch outside. "Yeah, a section fell down this morning," he said, pointing across the water. "About 9 a.m. It had already been cut, but it wasn't supposed

A section of the bridge on the North Haven side of the bridge was slanting into the water.

"It's no surprise," the worker went on. "This job's We questioned one of the workers. "Nah, it didn't been screwed up since the word go. It's not safe."

The new bridge is scheduled to be in place by December. During the summer season, a temporary bridge is planned; though even before this last incident, some residents said that to take a month to put up a temporary bridge that would only be in place for two or three months and then have another month go by while the temporary bridge was taken down, did not seem like a costeffective or time-effective idea.

The bridge, by the way; was built in 1936 Department of Transportation is overseeing the bridge project. The DOT engineering supervisor, Ed Donovan, who was talking to reporters in sight of the collapsed section of the bridge, said that "This was not unexpected. It was kind of like a

MR ROMERO'S PIECE OF THE HAMPTONS

By H.J. Silva

The middle age man sitting in the accountant's office spoke in detail about his father-in-law's estate. Unaccompanied by wife or kin as is common when the subject is estate planning, he explained how he had been delegated by his father in- law to seek professional advice. As he spoke, the Certified Public Accountant, a woman, listened attentively, interjecting an occasional question or comment.

As I passed the office, she walked out into the hall and stopped me. "Do you know who that is?" nodding towards the office. "No, I don't recognize the voice," I replied. "That is the husband of Ana Romero, one of your ex-students at East Junior High School," she added.

I stopped and stared blankly. Ana Romero, who was she? It has been years since I was Assistant Principal at East Junior HS in Brentwood. Trying to come up with a face to match the name was mind boggling. It bothered me that I could not picture Ana's face. As Assistant Principal in charge of Student Discipline, I saw an average of thirty to forty students per day. Unless it was someone prone to challenge a teacher's authority, or get into fights regularly, it is likely I would not remember. Ana Romero was definitely not in this

"I would like to meet him, and send my regards to Ana," I said. We walked into her office and she introduced Al Rodriguez, the young man I had heard speaking earlier. He was about thirty-five, of medium height, with dark black hair. Al looked more Italian than Hispanic, although it was clear he had Hispanic mannerisms, and lived in Brentwood

He informed me that besides Ana, her two brothers also attended East Junior HS. The name still did not ring a bell," Romero is a common Spanish surname, and I had had dealings with several Romero families. "Ana and I still live in Brentwood, in Regis Park," he added. "That is where her father lives, and that is where she wants to live," he mused emphatically. The emphasis on living in Brentwood, served to accentuate a departure from the path of "upward mobility" that many second generation Hispanics follow.

Brentwood has the largest Hispanic student population of any suburban school district in New York State. This came to be, because in the 1940's the New York State Health Department built huge facilities for the mentally ill in Brentwood and nearby Central Islip. Within five miles of each other, they attracted thousands of entry level workers from New York City, most of whom were Puerto Rican and African Americans who worked as orderlies or maintenance staff, and lived in nearby rented housing. Although work was steady, pay and raises were minimal. High rents, cramped housing, and low wages eventually led to unsavory neighborhoods in Regis Park, Brentwood and Carlton Park, Central Islip. In three decades, scores of homes all owned by the same landlord, became so dilapidated, that in the 1970's the Town of Islip filed suit and acquired them. After renovating the houses, building sidewalks and neighborhood parks, the Town sold them back to the families at cost.

Although no longer run down, the children of the original families consider Regis Park homes too small and spartan to raise a family. Most of the "old timers," however, love their bantam houses and wouldn't think of moving. They love the bodegas, their Spanish speaking neighbors, and the annual Puerto Rican Day Parade. On the first

Plum Island: Safe Or Not?

Officials In Southampton Present Their Case For Bio Safety Level 4

By Jerry Cimisi

"It is absolutely not possible that anything could happen on Plum Island that would cause a need for evacuation," said Roger Breeze, Associate Administer for the United States Department of Agriculture's (USDA) Research Service (ARS). At a public meeting in Southampton last Sunday, officials from the U.S. Department of Agriculture presented the public with assurances that the department's upgrade of the animal disease research facility on Plum Island will not in any way pose a health threat to East End residents. It was apparent many in the audience were not convinced.

Last September, a New York Times article sparked local fears that the Plum Island Animal Disease Center, which has been in operation since 1954, would be upgraded from a Bio Safety Level 3 to Bio Safety Level 4 and as a result be handling diseases that were more likely to be transmitted to humans. The proposed upgrade is a direct result of fears of bioterrorism; the country had to be prepared to contain or combat any agents of biological terrorism.

But within the past week, East End Congressman Michael Forbes, who is on the House Appropriations Committee, was instrumental in keeping funds that would be necessary for the upgrade to Bio Safety Level 4 out of the President's 2001 budget. But the USDA is still seeking the funds for the 2002 budget.

Floyd P. Horn, Administrator for the ARS, who was the main official speaker at the meeting, said that although for the most part the Times article was accurate, the above would not be the case. Plum Island does currently handle zoonotic diseases, that is, pathogens that can pass from animals to humans. But it would not be doing research on diseases such as Ebola or Lyme disease. Bio Safety Level 3 insures that there is no passage of viruses or bacteria into the outside world; a step up to Level 4 would only increase safety precautions such as the wearing of biohazard suits, so that these pathogens cannot be contracted by researchers.

There are currently no Bio Safety Level 4 labs in the United States.

Plum Island's mission, as Mr. Horn stressed, was to make sure no disease devastated the American livestock industry. The importance of livestock to the economy was evident in figures that were presented on one of the slides that were shown during the meeting. There are 350 million poultry in the U.S. (far exceeding the 260 million human population) and there are about 100 million cattle.

Two agencies from the USDA work on Plum Island: the Agricultural Research Service and the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS). The latter agency has the job of diagnosing livestock diseases, while the ARS is responsible for research on these diseases.

Mr. Horn asserted it was because of the type of research done at Plum Island that the United States had not suffered from incidents like those that had happened in Hong Kong, where the government had all the chickens there killed because a dangerous virus had been found in these animals, and Malaysia, where just last year, one hundred thousand pigs were shot due to a number being found with the Nepah virus.

Both diseases crossed over to people. In Hong Kong, six people died; in Malaysia one hundred. And in both incidents – as would be the case in America – such large numbers of animals were slaughtered not because they all, or even most, had the disease, but because of the possibility that they would and herefore get into the human food supply.

Mr. Horn said aside from the loss of human life, such loss of livestock was both "economic and psychological"; the latter was an interesting (and certainly very accurate) facet to add to the issue. Referring to the one hundred thousand pigs that were killed in Malaysia, he said that if an equal number of cattle had to be slaughtered and buried in America, "It would require a trench ten feet deep, ten feet wide and twenty-five miles long." He added that this would make a foreboding televised spectacle and that the American people would not be willing to accept such an environmental outrage.

Referring to residents' concerns over Plum Island's existence in the first place, and fears that any pathogen could travel off the island and infect either animals or people, Mr. Horn talked about the containment systems on the island. The buildings in which research is carried on are under what is called negative pressure: air pressure that is less than the air pressure outside. If a leak occurs, air flows in, not out. This containment negative pressure is repeated in separate rooms within the buildings. This principle is also followed

Mr. Horn asserted it was because of the type in any biohazard suits employees would use.

"We are much more worried about organisms comeing into Plum Island than leaving it," added, Roger Breeze, who is also a former Center Director for Plum Island from 1987-95.

When some members of the audience questioned why a facility such as Plum Island should be so near a populated area, Mr. Horn countered with the undeniable fact that some of the most deadly diseases known to humankind, such as Ebola and the Marberg virus (related to Ebola), both of which have an enormously high fatality rate (in some cases 90 percent), are stored and studied at the Center for Disease Control right in the heart of Atlanta. "Every hospital, many of which are in very populated areas, have hazardous pathogens or materials, such as radiological materials and they are kept contained," he said.

Plum Island was purchased from Indians, both the Montauketts and Corchaugs, in 1669 by Samuell Wyllys of Hartford, Connecticut. The island was sold in 1688 to Joseph Dudley, who would eventually become governor of the Massachusetts Colony from 1702 -1715. In the early 1700s the western end of the island was farmed by Joseph Beebe and Daniel Tuthill farmed the eastern half. In 1805 Benjamin Jerome purchased portions of the island; by 1834 his son Richard Jerome owned most of the island and used it for crops and cattle. The entire island was bought by A.S. Hewitt, a former mayor of New London. He had originally intended to use it as a summer resort but, in 1897, sold 150 acres on the east side of the island to the War Department for $25,000. A gun battery was constructed there that year. By 1901 the War Department bought the rest of the island, with the exception of the lighthouse — which had been the very first lighthouse George Washington had authorized. By 1914, as the Great War began in Europe, Fort Terry had been established on the island.

At war's end, Fort Terry was considered in "caretaker status," overseen by Fort H.G. Wright at Fishers Island. But with World War II, Fort Terry was again a training base for the army; additional gun batteries were constructed. In 1948, three years after the war, Fort Terry was once again unused and overseen by Fort Wright.

Then, in 1952, Fort Terry was transferred to the U.S. Army Chemical Corps. Countering claims that Plum Island had begun as a biological weapons facility, Mr. Horn said whether or not Plum Island had been intended for such a facility, the Chemical Corps Plum Island facility was deactivated in May, 1954, without ever operating on the island at all. It was in that year that the Plum Island Animal Disease Center took over the facilities that had been built for the Corps.

During the question and answer period of the meeting, David Carney of Sag Harbor voiced the common concern of Plum Island's proximity to the East End (it is about one and a quarter miles off Orient Point, the tip of the North Fork). "I don't think that past safety is a guarantee of future safety."

Mr. Horn said that aside from the island's safety record, to rebuild a new Plum Island-type facility elsewhere would not be cost effective. "To ask the American taxpayer to pay for a new location elsewhere, won't work."

And speaking of location: Journalist Karl Grossman of Noyac said that when the Manhattan

Project was initiated, the government built the various facilities that contributed to the project inland, away from the shores where they would be more vulnerable to attack. If terrorism was a concern, wasn't Plum Island vulnerable?

Roger Breeze said that a terrorist did not have to come to Plum Island to find harmful organisms; what was being studied at Plum Island is available in many other places all over the world. A fire or bomb at Plum Island would destroy pathogens, not release them into the environment.

Mr. Grossman then asked what hard evidence existed for a biological terrorist attack in this country and had there been any such incidents in America in the past? Horn replied that during World War I, a German-American scientist who had returned from the front fighting for Germany, was able to infect anthrax and glanders in cattle and horses that were slaughtered to feed American troops and that a number of soldiers were infected with the diseases.

Both the Soviet Union and South Africa had, in the past, extensive biological chemical warfare programs. A scientist who had left Russia after the breakup of the Soviet Union has recently published a book on the germ warfare program in the USSR.

"There are – or were – 10,000 scientists in the former Soviet Union involved in this," said Horn. By contrast, there are only about 2,000 scientists in the United States who are studying biological weapons. "We are thirty years behind in bioweapons research." The United States does not have a biological weapons program – at least officially; President Nixon ordered America's germ warfare program ended in his first term.

Referring to the 10,000 Soviet scientists, Horn added, "We don't know where all of them are, but we are sure that a number of them have gone to work for what we call rogue states."

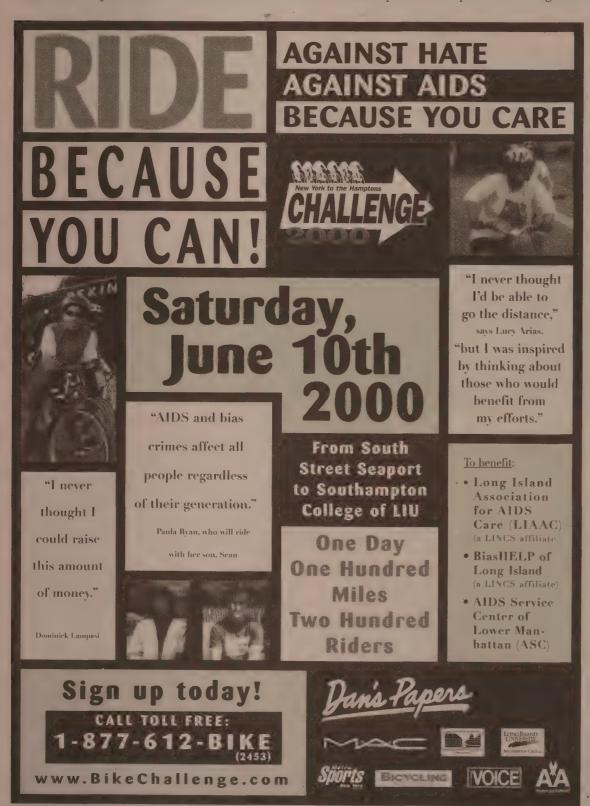

One of those rogue states is Iraq. In terms of the present day threat, Horn said the USDA was informed by intelligence officials that, for instance, United Nations inspectors had found Iraq had stored 2,000 tons of wheat stem rot fungus.

Late last summer and into autumn, the West Nile encephalitis virus attacked people and animals on Long Island and in New York City. It was the first time the virus had been found in this country. There were a handful of human deaths. In some areas many birds died, and in the Riverhead area, a number of horses contracted the disease. These horses were euthanized. In 1997, an Iraqi defector had written a book in which he stated that Saddam Hussein had considered this particular virus as a weapon of biological warfare. And then, whether coincidence or not, the virus shows up in the metropolitan area two years later.

One of the local legends about West Nile is that it had come from Plum Island. Robert Breeze said that it was only recently, after the outbreak of late summer/early autumn, that Plum Island received samples of the virus and injected it into four horses. Breeze said that the virus did not replicate in any of the horses.

Whether Plum Island goes to Bio Safety Level 4 will certainly be a matter of continued debate. Greenport Village Mayor David Kapell attended the meeting with his wife and both spoke in support of the facility. Kappell said Plum Island had been a good neighbor for many years and that it had provided a wide range of jobs locally. He added that the village board had just passed a resolution in support of the upgrade.

The majority of the critics of Plum Island, whether of the proposed expanded research or the way the facility operates now, are surely not looking at one undeniable and unpleasant fact. Plum Island exists to protect U.S. livestock. In a culture that is carnivorous, a facility such as Plum Island naturally follows. The huge meat industry, in which hundreds of millions of animals are slaughtered for human consumption, inevitably produces an extremely negative environmental impact. If you don't want a Plum Island stop eating animal products. This reporter did, long ago.

Observations of a New Islander #93 The Driveway from Hell

I always guarantee a minimum of ten percent truth per column. But today's column is all true; none of the characters have been changed despite years of trying.

My mother and step-father live in a house on West Neck Road that has the worst driveway on the eastern seaboard. It was designed by an engineer who was blind or drunk, possibly both. Going down the driveway puts you at a forty degree incline at least. It only takes a moment to get down, but it can take days to get up.

If you're driving, you have to race to the top and shoot halfway out onto West Neck Road causing oncoming traffic to slam on their brakes. In the summer, because it's busy, you send someone up first who stands in the middle of the road to stop traffic and gives you the signal to gun it and get up that hill.

My parents bid farewell to company several times each visit. They wave good-bye on the back porch and watch the company go up the hill. They wave again when they roll back down. Mother shouts the driveway. her instruction to gun it and waves good-bye again. But they never gun it enough, so soon she waves hello again as they roll back down for the third time. The third time is usually the charm. The driver now knows he must use "the force" to get up this friggin' hill. He grips the steering wheel, downshifts all the way, eyes forward and up to the top and halfway into the street. There, that wasn't so bad now was it?

Backseat passengers are advised to walk to the top of the driveway and let the car get out first before they get in, otherwise the rear-end of the car whams against the big hump right at the top.

In winter, my folks don't even try to escape in the car. They climb to the top, clutching the posts that flank the driveway, one post at a time, till they make it to the summit, where I pick them up. The hump is steeper than the rest of the hill. On one very cold morning, mother climbed up the driveway and practically hurled herself over the hump and heaved herself into my van, clutching the door and seat so she wouldn't fall back down

Sometimes I simply deliver the groceries. I park at the top of mom's driveway. I tie the IGA bags closed and slide them down to Ma and Pa Beaudry at the bottom of Kamikaze Hill. You want that chicken to go? No problem! It's gone!

Recently on one of our bitter cold days, the snow had a nice crust of ice on it. I stopped my van at the top of the driveway to pick up my son after work. My mother stood at the bottom of the hill encouraging him, I stood at the top doing the same. My son only weighs sixty-five pounds and couldn't break through the ice for traction. He would take two steps; fall, and slide all the way back down. He needed ice picks and petons to make the climb. It took the poor kid about thirty minutes to climb up twenty feet. Neither my mother nor I could get him because we knew we couldn't stay vertical on this icy driveway.

Someday the folks will get the driveway paved and pitched lower. It's really only been like that since they moved here twenty-five years-ago, I guess we all can manage another year...

years ago in dan's papers

TEN YEARS AGO "Pine Valley Not a Joke" February 16, 1990

This paper went to press Tuesday night, which was too late to cover the public meeting that took place at the Pine Valley Village Hall at that time. The meeting was supposed to be about a zoning plan, but opponents of the Village, who would like to see it dismantled, said the zoning plan would likely go nowhere. Dismantle a village? Some people have had friends write letters to them and address them to "Joke, New York, 11901." The Riverhead Post Office has delivered them. For more about this troubled Village, read on.

The short, sad history of a village in the Hamptons seems finally to be coming to an end. There have been shouting matches, fistfights, lawsuits and resignations and on May 1 of this year, the residents of the village, known as Pine Valley, will be voting on whether to dissolve it. It was incorporated in 1988 from a small and remote wooded section of Southampton with high hopes for the future. It has not turned out that

Some residents feel, however, that this short lived village is such an embarrassment that action should be taken even before the vote scheduled in May. Not long ago, they brought in a petition, signed by ten percent of the area's 791 residents, to change the name of the Village to "Joke" from its present name of Pine Valley

It had come about like this.

"Where do you live?

"I live in Pine Valley."

"Oh, that's a joke."

As it has turned out, the Mayor and Village clerk have had to take this petition seriously. It is from more than ten percent of the residents. It conforms to all the laws. It would actually have to be placed on the ballot unless something else was done.

The something else, apparently thought up by Village Attorney Usha Srivastava, is to declare all the inmates of the Suffolk County Jail, located in the Village limits, to be legal residents. There are about five hundred inmates - the number varies from week to week as prisoners come and go - and if you add their number to the number of regular residents, the village population virtually doubles and the petition falls short of the required ten percent. In other words, if you can't lower the water, raise the bridge.

Making the prisoners citizens of course presents other problems. They could run for office or appoint village officials. Perhaps they, could vote to make crime legal. Whether they could be citizens or not, however, is open to question. State law defines a person's permanent "residence," as that place where a person "maintains a fixed, permanent and principal home and to which wherever temporarily located, he always intends to return.'

In other words, citizenship in Pine Valley would be no problem for the hardened criminals, the lifers and chronic repeat offenders.

In any case, those who have brought the petition have decided not to question the decision to throw it out because it lacks sufficient signatures if you include the prisoners. Their point has been made, they say, and there are, after all, only about ninety days until the residents vote to wipe the place off the face of the earth.

Pine Valley's problems came about because the founders of the Village argued enthusiastically that by forming the Village they could lower taxes. Since the place got put together, they have done nothing in a concrete way to make that happen, and in fact recently passed a bill that raises taxes. Arguments have taken place over proposed commercial developments, over people's motives, over just about anything you could imagine. On several occasions, people have taken a swipe at one -Dan Rattiner another.

domino effect." He said there were about twelve sections in the water. It made things a bit more difficult, of course, but he added that the project was still on schedule and that it should definitely be completed by the beginning of next winter.

He went on to say at this point it was not certain if the temporary bridge would be up by Memorial Day or the Fourth of July. "All I can say is that it will definitely be up by the Fourth of July." (When Mr. Braverman and I introduced ourselves as representing Dan's Papers, he said, "Well, we let the bridge fall down there because we wanted to keep those lions in North Haven from getting to Sag Harbor." For the uninitiated, he was referring to a hoax that ran in a recent issue – take a look at the letters page.)

Mr. Donovan said that the bridge had been cut in sections of thirty-seven feet. They are about forty tons apiece. The cranes that lift these huge pieces can hoist a maximum weight of 300 tons, though if a crane is lifting an object at an angle, it cannot handle as much weight.

The new bridge will be a little bit wider than the old, said Donovan, with a span of around 400 feet.

It's a long way until December. The village hopes that no further mishaps occur. And perhaps more than a few locals will be wary of trying out that temporary bridge this summer. It might be a good idea to let the summer people use it...

week of June, Adelante sponsors a Puerto Rican Day Parade which rivals New York City's for color and enthusiasm. Thousands line up along Brentwood's Fifth Avenue to re-live their cultural roots, savor Latino music, eat roasted pig and rice and beans.

The elder Romero is now sixty-seven years old and in failing health. How he came to own a piece of the Hamptons and be in need of estate planning, is the subject of our story.

Approximately thirty years ago, while employed as an automobile mechanic, Mr. Romero, injured his left hand, seriously enough to require emergency orthopedic surgery. Although not life threatening, the injury required extensive physical rehabilitation and led to loss of pay. Eventually Mr. Romero received a one time settlement award of several thousand dollars and although he could have moved, he put the cash away and continued to live and raise his family in Brentwood.

At some point following the award, Mr. Romero came in contact with an American Indian from the East End of Long Island who told him of his plight. It seems that the man's son was a promising High School Senior with an opportunity to attend Harvard University. There was however, a barrier in the way. The father did not have the living expense money the son would need to attend such a prestigious and high-priced college. Over the course of weeks the men talked about the problem several times and finally agreed on a deal to raise the money needed. The American Indian would deed Mr. Romero a two acre lot of property he owned in Bridgehampton in exchange for four yearly payments of seven thousand dollars. They sealed the deal with a handshake and over the next four years, Mr. Romero made four annual payments of seven thousand dollars.

By the end of the fourth year, Mr. Romero had two thousand dollars left from his settlement, and the man's son was about to graduate from Harvard University, Suma Cum Laude. In mid June, Mr. Romero was visited by the boy's father and his recently graduated son. They sat down and the American Indian spoke of the pride he had in his son and thanked Mr. Romero for making it possible. And then as a departing gesture, the American Indian took a document he had in an envelope and handed it to Mr. Romero. Mr. Romero opened it, and saw that it was an executed deed naming him owner of a two acre lot in Bridgehampton.

The deed cited previous ownership of the land, members of a Southampton Indian tribe, which in turn had deeded it to Mr. Romero's American Indian friend. This was not just an ordinary later day deed, but an original deed to land owned by the first Indian settlers in what is now the Hamptons. Although expecting the transaction, Mr. Romero was vaguely hesitant to be a real estate owner in Bridgehampton. "It's too far from Brentwood," he thought, and besides, "...isn't that where all the rich people live?"

In the mid 90's, Mr. Romero decided to turn his real estate holding into cash, his preferred venue of property. He contacted Cook Pony Real Estate somewhere in the Hamptons and offered them the listing. In a few days, a Real Estate Broker called Mr. Romero and asked for a copy of the Deed and a survey. Mr. Romero obliged minus the survey requested. He was not given a survey and wasn't about to pay for one. Three weeks later, Cook Pony called back with an appraisal of $600,000 for the two acres described in the deed.

Mr. Romero sat back stunned. "Sell" he ordered, "I want the money for myself and my kids." Not long after, Mr. Romero donned suit and tie and traveled to a well appointed real estate suite in the Hamptons. A bevy of secretaries, real estate agents and lawyers, fawned all over him as he executed the deed and turned it over to its new owners; a young man and his wife. Mr. Romero left the meeting with a check just shy of $600,000 and as he drove back to Brentwood, turned to his son-in-law and said "...it was nice to own a piece of the Hamptons..."

Some months later, Mr. Romero sent his trusted son-in-law, Al Rodriguez to work out the intricacies of estate planning. He wanted to make sure his children received an equal share of the newly acquired wealth, and his old Indian friend was compensated adequately. I eventually contacted Ana Romero to renew our acquaintance, and soon after hearing her voice a mental picture began to emerge. Ana was that lovely girl with jet black hair, on whom I could count to bring an occasional message home about her wayward brothers. Ana now has three children and works for a medical technology company. When her estate settlement arrives, she plans to stay put. "I love Brentwood," she said, contentment in her voice.

Why Did Dan's Papers Rate Lenz "Best Winery -- Depth of Vintages" in 1999?

The New York Times

"A Pomerol from Peconic" Goldberg

"..compares most favorably, and more accurately, with a good wine from St.-Émilion than anything from California." Prial

"...the Lenz Winery,... year after year has made one of America's two best gewürztraminers." Goldberg

"And how do Lenz wines stack up in head-to-head competition with French superstars? They equal or surpass them." Scholem

"Drink after the year 2000!" the label advises. Fat chance!" "...this wine was born with big-league class." Goldberg

"Thick with cassis. Dark, with ruby-fire glints. Sumptuous aroma. Love the nose. Love it. Licorice. "Sweet". Berrylike.

Wow! Tastes smooth. Elegant. E-l-e-g-a-n-t. Perfect balance. Finesse. .
Plummy. It's the blackcurrant - the cassis - that gets you. Classical Médoc."
Goldberg

"...three vintages of Lenz Gold Label Chardonnay performed honourably in the company of the same years from Drouhin's Marquis de Laguiche Montrachet." Steven Spurrier

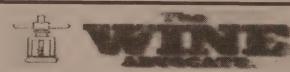

"To me, this wine reaches a higher plane than anything else here; there's this Lenz, then there's everything else." M.Todd

"If this vintage were a crown, it's set with warm rubies, a few diamonds, and one crown jewel!" Mike Todd

plaisirs

"The (Lenz) 1993 and 1994 merlots, powerful and balanced, dominated the ('93 and '94) Pétrus vintages M.Dovaz

"The Lenz Gold Label 1993, 94, 95 were opposed by Burgundies of the same years, Montrachet, Marquis de Laguiche (J. Drouhin)! All three times, the Montrachet showed itself to be nervous, with citrus fruits, lemony, but totally dominated by oak. All three times the American wine was like a summer's day, rich, balanced and generous." M.Dovaz

"(The merlot '95) reveals excellent ripeness, with loads of chocolate and mocha-imbued red and black cherries that are found throughout its flavor profile and long finish. Presently luscious, creamy, and verging on opulent, this wine possesses the requisite balance, fruit, and tannin for aging.

Anticipated maturity: Now -- 2005. 88+ points." Rovani

"Lenz's 1996 Gold Label Chardonnay reveals complex hazelnut, yeast, and toast aromatics as well as flavors. This well crafted, medium-bodied, silky-textured wine will be at its best if drunk over the next 2-3 years." Rovani

William Sokolin

"Indisputably the leader of the region. The 'Le Montrachet' of Long Island..."

"What can we say? Mouton Rothschild 1982 at $10,000/case or Lenz Cab at $240/case? The answer is easy: save $9,760 and try the Lenz."

"This property is scoring knockouts with all their wines..."

"...one of the finest sparkling wines we've ever come across on this side of the Atlantic. How a small winery not known for its sparkling wines accomplished this feat is beyond us."

Josh Wesson and David Rosengarten

"Lenz has always had a hot hand with its Gewürtzraminers, and its 1988 is nothing short of a minor triumph."

"Leading the pack is the terrific Lenz Gold Label, a miracle of fruit, vanilla and gingersnaps." Rosengarten

"Ted Conklin, proprietor of The American Hotel, and one of the Hamptons' leading wine authorities, participated in the blind tasting and later said, 'In the past decade, Lenz has been the best representative of the potential of Long Island wines. Lenz has annually been pitted against Pétrus and other great chateaux, and this is a reaffirmation that Lenz wines are equal to the best wines of the world." Shari Alexander

"Lenz champagne won Eberhard Müller's blind tasting over Veuve Cliquot; and he puts the [Lenz] winery's barrel-fermented Chardonnays ahead of Grand Cru Montrachets. 'In a tremendous upset,' he recalls, 'we voted the Lenz '95 Merlot ahead of [Chateu] Pétrus!'" NY Magazine

DAN TRAVELS

WEM in Alberta is not a new candy, a Web Site or even a TV station. It's simply the world's largest mall. Actually it is much more than a mall, located about 10 miles west of the Province's capital city of Edmonton.

WEM is a giant area devoted not only to the mall which currently has over 800 shops and 110 restaurants, but also a hotel, an indoor skating rink, a giant beach under glass capable of producing twelve foot waves.

Most amazing, perhaps, is its "undercover" screaming roller coaster that swoops up and down a tower structure equivalent to a 14 story building. It's part of the mall's Galaxyland Amusement Park that is supposed to entertain visitors once they've tired of shopping. Ditto for the skating rink, dolphin presentations and all kinds of strolling "actors" that provide atmosphere, instant entertainment, and a fun-fare atmosphere. Covering 5.4 million square feet, the WEM cost $1.2 Canadian millions and attracts better than 29 million annual visitors, half of them from more than 100 miles away. It has a dinner theatre, Casino and a on-the-premises hotel boasting 354 normal rooms plus 118 themed suites called Hollywood, Roman, Victorian and even Igloo. There's also a 40-story space-themed Play area for

In 1981 when the first section of WEM was conceived and brought to fruition, someone had the idea of including built-in add -on strolling attractions. These turn up whenever management can come up with a new idea. Currently there are several strategically placed cigar store Indians from the early 1920's, a miniature 18 hole golf lay-out (on the roof). Don't be phased if you see a pretend-movie crew filming a gangster shootout at one of the indoor street corners, or talking ad being set up

All this was accomplished in three WEM enlargements in 1983, 1985 and 1998, making this complex Canada's prime tourist attraction not withstanding Niagara Falls which Canada shares with Western New York State.

A few years ago when Tanger Mall came to eastern LI's Suffolk County, it was the marvel of the area, a giant shopping area with central parking, (but not under glass and not specializing in entertainment as well as shopping). Still, Tanger is OUR Mall and draws good eastern Suffolk crowds.

I went to WEM prepared to be overwhelmed. I was. There was that 5/6 model of Columbus' Santa Maria floating in barely enough water and fairly full size streets laid out to tempt me.

I'd been allocated a whole three hours to dash in and out of typical restaurants, see what the shops were selling. I couldn't resist seeing what was being provided at the ice rink, the sand beach and the roller coaster. Fortunately, the mall people had provided me with a mini golf cart that, once I (a non-golfer) got the feel of the controls, would swish me around at a good clip.

Actually my erratic driving knocked down only one mannekin, unbreakable fortunately. No one seemed to mind my clumsy movements and even greeted me in friendly fashion as I did my best to "cover my beat," smiling at other cart drivers, their canes or walkers attached to their special loan vehicles. During my short stay I counted over twenty wheeled vehicles enjoying their special privilege.

The strategy worked. I immersed myself in the steadily moving not-quite crowd, ebbing and flowing as the combined spirit moved.

Because time was important, I planned my course. No shopping, just seeing, assessing, taking photos and jotting down snatches of conversations. Everyone appeared to be having fun. All ages, both sexes. Those who tired, sat, talked and watched. Because of my selfimposed shopping ban, I have a good excuse to return. Meanwhile, there's always Tanger on a non snowy or rainy day, since our home grown Mall has no protective covering.

Shop'til You Drop With Maria Tennariello

Spring is not quite in the air yet, but the weather has been much better for all of us, especially the shopaholics like myself. Let's shop!

Starting out on Main Street in Sag Harbor at Illusions, I found a very nice sale going on right now for any occasion, even belated Valentine's. There are embellished pashmina's and handpainted silk scarves and there is a money saving 40% off. Check out the wonderful embroidered handbags for the springtime at 20% to 40% off. I loved the colorful crystal jewelry imported from Germany and Italy as well as silver and semi-precious stones that are also 40% off. This superb sale will run through March 10. Hey, the early bird always catches the bargains. Thought I was going to say worm, eh?

Southampton's Going Nuts is filled to the rafters with candy and nuts for every event and occasion. Sugar free chocolates, balloons and so much more. I'm like a bull in a china closet in this shop; I don't know where to look first.

At BookHampton, Southampton, East Hampton and Sag Harbor (Sag Harbor store will open early March), they are having their second annual "Customer Appreciation Weekend Sale" that will run from Friday, February 18 through Monday, February 21. All merchandise will be 25% off regular prices. Stock up now, for all your favorite books and much more.

On the North Highway in Southampton at Windows & Walls Unlimited, you can save up to 60% off Hunter Douglas Duettes, Honeycomb shades, Country Woods, wood blinds, Lightlines mini blinds and more. Windows & Walls Unlimited is your complete source for the casual, elegant and unique window treatments. Call 287-1515 for information.

I just had to stop into B&N Furniture & Sleep Shop on the County Road 39 to see what all the excitement was about. Well, how about up to 50% off on sofas, sofa beds, recliners, tables, lamps, pictures, cedar chests, mattress sets and much much more. There are traditional and contemporary styles in fine furniture designs at pretty low sale prices.

Carpet One of the Hamptons, located on County Road 39 in Southampton is having a "Presidents Day Sale" that ends on February 21.

Passing through Bridgehampton, I couldn't help but notice the big "Sale" sign in the window of Complements Lingerie. A quick turn and before I knew it I was in the shop checking out the sale merchandise. There is a whopping 40% to 60% off on selected merchandise which includes, bras, panties, nighties, slippers, robes, body suits, exercise wear and much more. While I was in Bridgehampton, I went into the New World Pie restaurant and thought I would surprise my grandchildren with their Caesar salad for two and large classic pizza pie special to go.

Have you ever been to Bar Boy Products in Hampton Bays? Well, let me tell you going there is definitely worth the trip. This famous food service equipment and supplies store is featuring this week the Viking Professional Performance ranges, all gas units, in all three sizes, thirty six, forty eight and sixty inches, a three hundred dollar rebate, until April 30. Also available are refrigerators, icemakers, dishwashers, wine coolers and much more. An interesting item is the home beer tap unit that sell for $870 complete. Nice for those big back yard bashes. Call Jimmy at 728-7103 for complete information and he will be more than happy to help you.

I know it's a little early but I have already ordered all my daffodils for the upcoming spring season. The American Cancer Society on Long Island is offering "daffodil days, hope blooms", which is the flower of hope, just in time for spring. They are available in bouquets or vases that make special gifts for family and friends for the Easter and Passover holiday. The bouquets of ten daffodils cost only $6 and can be picked up at the ACS office in Hauppauge. Your donation for the daffodils will support life-saving cancer research as well as cancer education, prevention, treatment and programs for cancer patients and their families. Call 516-436-7070, ext. 3329 for details.

I am looking forward to the warmer weather; it makes my shopping trips a lot easier. Until next week. Ciao and Happy Shopping!

is proud to welcome

ART COMMENTARY

ARTS-IN-EDUCATION: STUDENT ART SHOWS AT LOCAL MUSEUMS

We're lucky here in the Hamptons to have creative art programs flourishing at our public and private schools. The same may not be true in other states or, for that matter, in developing nations where art is more an integral part of life rather than a formalized component of education. Even so, an individual's first exposure to art often occurs in school, no matter where he/she lives around the world. Many self-taught artists as well as those with degrees, both emerging and established, owe their success to a devoted and inspiring teacher

Two student art shows at our local museums demonstrate the presence of such devoted art teachers. There seem to be more artist-in-residence programs, too, a highly welcomed and worthwhile endeavor. Each exhibit also marks the diverse approaches that art education can take - at least since last year's presentations. Another difference: Guild Hall's show appears juried (by the art instructors themselves) while the display at the Parrish Museum is not.

Concerning methodologies, the exhibit at Guild Hall, which includes East Hampton School District and those farther east, seems more traditional, although no less wonderful. Yet within that more traditional mode there are exceptions. The younger children at John M.

Marshall Elementary School are doing copies of well-known artists, like Mondrian; however, their projects are also motivated by less conventional artists, like Keith Haring and area resident and effective role model, Miriam Schapiro.

Also traditional in this day and age are art projects that are integrated into the history curriculum: Springs' Chinese seismographs Amagansett's Egyptian canopic jars are such examples, (Thank goodness this kind of integration is no longer considered unusual).

What's especially good about the art is the variety of materials encouraged, especially the wire designs by East Hampton's pre-kindergarten pupils. Content-wise, however, this critic didn't see many political-social pieces (except the Congo Rain Forest project by Montauk School and a few tion was also paid to integrating art as part of the general curriculum. There was a good mix of group projects (reserved for the younger pupils) and individual work (for older students) as well, yet The Hayground School successfully combined both approaches with two endeavors: their Shakespearean puppets and carousel piece. There were a few political pieces, too, which bear mentioning, including one against animal testing by Westhampton Beach High School's Robin Rakobitsh.

Even so, the Parrish Museum's exhibit seems less traditional, with more ambitious, creative projects the rule rather than the exception; installations, like "Radio Days" by Our Lady of the Hamptons, shows real imagination and vigor. Thank goodness. If we can't find energy

Center. The night view from my studio allowed me to see not only midtown but also Queens and The George

Carl Scorza is part of a dying breed: not only does he continue to work outdoors while other artists may resort to using photographs, but he still finds painting "a real pleasure." (While it would be nice to imagine that all artists truly like what they do, that isn't always case.)

The parttime Springs resident paints many local scenes that give him pleasurer o m Accabonic Harbor to the moon rising at the end of Gardiner's Island which is captured on this week's they capture a bucolic setting or an urban environment. But there are other aspects of art which also account for his "pleasure." "I'm interested in the formal elements of what I paint," he explains.

Washington Bridge.

Although we are intrigued by the idea of such gratification, what specifically turns Mr. Scorza on? "Going out with my easel, painting what I see," he answers enthusiastically. "Especially painting at night, when things are startling. I'm really making a collection of appropriate metaphors, creating perceptual painting. I'm following a historic trend, artists in the past who painted spontaneously from life."

What is it about the moon, particularly, that moves Mr. Scorza? "It's a challenge to pursue nocturnes," he notes. "Like painting outdoors, it allows me to learn about art and get better at it."

It's a huge leap from painting an East End scene to representing all of midtown Manhattan and beyond, but that's just what Mr. Scorza did during a recent project: "Graham Nickson, Dean of the New York Studio School with whom I studied briefly, invited me and a group of the picture plane."

Mr. Scorza derives his knowledge about art's formal traits from both artists (including Mr. Nickson and Wayne Thiebaud) and places, like Portugal, New England and the Caribbean where he learned about light and color values. He also learns a great deal by going to galleries and museums. "The advantage of living in New York (and growing up in Yonkers) is going to the Museum of Modern Art and the Metropolitan," Mr. Scorza says. "No matter what question I have, I go to a museum, and some work will provide an answer."

He continues, citing examples of particular contemporary artists who have provided answers as well: "I may go to an exhibit by Janet Fish, for example, and see how she dealt with pinks and blues because I'm dealing with the same colors. I see how she confronted a similar problem.

As a self-taught artist, Mr. Scorza is still learning on his own, inspired by other artists and his own curiosity. Still, his guiding force is the pleasure he receives and gives in the act of creating, "It may sound corny," he remarks honestly, "but the whole thing is a miracle.

Guy De Fraumeni's HOLLYWOOD in The Hamptons

Like those postage due Valentines, my heart went out to the screen adaptation of Sam Shepard's play, Simpatico, a quite sympathetic project, to me, dealing as it does with ethics and conscience in a time when they seem scarcer than the Emu... and given the unpopularity of moralistic provocation, Simpatico, like the other big, odd bird... may not fly.

THAT'S WHAT MAKES HORSE RACING

Experiencing a Sam Shepard play is like watching raw recruits stalking about in a mine field... and you recoil as they brazenly poke at blemishes in the barren terrain. As in most of Shepard's drama, they play out awkwardly and riskily in a national no-man's land of urban disenfranchisement, where a symbiotic war grinds on between the city people and would-be, far away, openspaces, cowboy hat-folk... secretly knowing that they all have been corrupted, to a fare-thee-well, by the process. Mr. Shepard's characters loom much larger than the Marlboro man posters he is at times pasted over with. His are bigger than life symbols... stage presences that spirit themselves with speech soaked full of American raw -boned tragedy. Simpatico has horse racing as its setting and too young, cow-poking men use it to angle their way to big money. Two decades later they find their lives blistering infectiously with the disease spread by their youthful chicanery.

HEAVY HOOF BEATS

The film version, expanded broadly to fill the stage play's unseen aspects (filled in by audience mental participation), adds perhaps too much to the playwright's heaviness, giving it a theatrical obesity that smacks of being over corn fed. A tough job for a first time feature director/screenwriter, Matthew Warchus, a British theatre director. He's done well on the whole, seeing that he had to wrestle with a property so idiomatically American. Although, there is some Brit-style underplaying as with the marvelous Brit actor Albert Finney (playing an American) as one corner of a quartet of despoiled, wrongdoing perpetrators who are their own victims... eventually. In fine form are Jeff Bridges and Nick Nolte as Lyle and Vinnie, the two horsemen who unleash their own Apocalypse when, as young men they conspired, along with their girlfriend Rosie, feverishly played by Sharon Stone, to pull a series of scams to "fix" horse races. To do this successfully they need the cooperation of the racing Commissioner, Simms, Albert Finney's role. To get him to participate, the young Lyle and Vinnie, played in flashbacks by Liam Waite (looking a lot like Sam Shepard) and Shawn Hatory, set Simms up with a youthful prostitute and photograph him in the saddle so to speak. They then blackmail him with the pornographic pictures. As it turns out, the "prostitute" is Rosie wearing a dark wig and not much else. The young threesome get away with all that money, free and easy (it seemed at the time) but, Simms is found out... disgraced and run out of the sport.

Simpatico ••••••

BRIDGES, NOLTE, STONE AND FINNEY IN A DEAD

At the film's start, Lyle (Bridges) is a wealthy horse breeder and thoroughbred trainer with a huge estate in Lexington, KY about to sell his triple-crown winning horse Simpatico, for about $30 million. Vinnie (Nolte) on the other hand, and coast, is a derelict staggering down streets and bars and living in a shack in (of all places) Cucamonga, CA, but, he has the lifetime, life line to Lyle and a battered shoe box containing the nasty photos. He's not been able to handle the whole thing and wants to expose the whole mess. Not surprisingly, Simms has made a new identity and life and has found peace. Stay with the movie as the screws turn tighter and tighter and very rash changes take on the chaos of a spill and tangle at one of the tracks hurdles. After seeing the film some might say, "Is that all they did? That's nothing!" See! There's problem one.

As a movie, Simpatico, takes on a Film Noir shading but never sustains it. It is too colorful. That is, however, the nature of what was conceived of as a comedy... and there's plenty of black there. Where the stage director in him erred Mr. Warchus has tried to make his version too cinematic, and as I've already carped... too broad. he could have reined in on Nolte's Down and Out in Beverly Hills attire and manner... and perhaps cool down Ms. Stone's late but very forceful entry into the film. And too many of the flashbacks were difficult to make out. They looked as if they were shot by the Blair Witch crew. Kind of standing around... not doin' much is another terrific actor, Catherine Keener, as Vinnie's simple n' plain convenience store clerk girlfriend. But, man oh, Man of War! Like all the unlikely other embittered and shifty goings on, it worked for me.

Shepard has successfully eluded movie stardom. He was thought to be the next Gary Cooper... and better after his appearance in The Right Stuff as the reluctant hero, Chuck Yeager. Instead he writes off-center plays with the will of an unbroken horse. He appears to be a singular man in the Great Divide of devoided America. (Lyle and Vinnie become each other... just as the brothers in his True West switch identity.) Where are they? Consider that Simpatico's foursome, who dove into the horse manure of wrongdoing, live in Purgatory, U.S.A. stinking to high heaven... while who paid the ultimate price but found grace? The horse.

MAYOR KOCH Goes % THE MOVIES

This flick has the best trailer I've seen in a long time. It was superb because it consisted of Craig Ferguson playing the role of Crawford Mackenzie, a gay hairdresser. His Scottish accent and his gay parody are very, very funny. But in the full length film, the accent and mannerisms pale and simply cannot carry the story.

The movie depends on comedic situations substituting for pratfalls, but they are rarely very funny. It is only playing at the Angelica. I got my tickets early in the day because I thought the theater would be jammed, but the theater was only two-thirds flail. I have never understood how the underground is so effective in conveying a bad buzz about films, and the underground tom-toms had been at work,

Now to the story. Crawford Mackenzie (Craig Ferguson) lives in Glasgow, Scotland and receives a letter from America. He thinks that the letter is an invitation to participate in a tournament to select the best ladies' hairdresser. However, it is really only an invitation to sit in the audience.

When he arrives in Hollywood, he quickly discovers this and the balance of the movie depicts his efforts to get permission to enter the contest He is ultimately successful, but in order to achieve his goals he has to enlist the help of Candy Harper (Frances Fisher), who is Sean Connery's publicist (press agent).

The plot is aided by the fact that within the movie a documentary is being made of Crawford's trip to America by the BBC's interviewer (Chris Langhain). Occasionally, the making of the documentary adds some minor laughs. Regrettably, none of the shticks can overcome the paucity of real comedy and real laughs. It is a weak comedic endeavor. Avoid.

silvia lehrer's cooking column

My quest for preparing the perfect chicken potpie took me on an interesting journey. After researching several cookbooks, magazine and newspaper clippings it boiled down (no pun intended) to a slightly pared down version of my own perfect chicken soup recipe. Fundamental to chicken potpie is cooked chicken, a white sauce, a variety of cooked vegetables and a crusty topping.

The venerable Joy of Cooking, Hobbs Merrill, offered no help except to point out that the dish consists of creamed chicken or turkey in a baked pie shell with a biscuit topping. Other cookbook recipes produced either a chicken that was overcooked "2 1/2-3 hours until it fell off the bone" or cooked the chicken and vegetables together in which case the vegetables would be irreparably overcooked in the time to properly cook the chicken. The resulting broth in any event would be necessary to prepare the essential white sauce.

Several recipes for chicken potpie called for a rich puff pastry. Preparing puff pastry is time consuming and can be intimidating. Although one can purchase frozen puff pastry, I opted to prepare an herb biscuit topping just because of the kind of homey dish chicken pot pie is. It was satisfying for me to complete the dish with the simply comforting idea of an all-American biscuit topping.

CHICKEN POT PIE WITH HERB BISCUIT CRUST

James Beard, in his tome, American Cookery, Little Brown, states, "For best results prepare the chicken and sauce and let cool thoroughly in the refrigerator before putting the crust on top." This technique permits for do-ahead preparation.

Serves 4-6

For the Chicken and Broth

- 1 4-5 pound chicken, cleaned
- 1 carrot, peeled
- 1 parsnip, peeled
- 1 celery rib, scrubbed and trimmed
- 1 onion pierced with 2 whole cloves
- 3 parsley sprigs
- 5-6 whole peppercorns

For the Vegetables

- 2 tablespoons vegetable oil
- 1 red onion, finely chopped
- 2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
- 1 bunch scallions, trimmed and sliced on the
- · diagonal
- 3-4 carrots, peeled and sliced on the diagonal
- 3-4 ribs celery, scrubbed, trimmed and sliced on the diagonal
- 1/2 pound button mushrooms, trimmed, rinsed and sliced
- 1 teaspoon fresh thyme leaves
- 1/4 cup chopped flat-leaf Italian parsley
- Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper to taste

For the White Sauce

- 4 tablespoons unsalted butter
- 4 tablespoons flour
- 2 1/2 cups reserved chicken broth
- 1/2 cup heavy cream, optional
- 1. Place chicken in a large saucepan with fresh water to cover. Bring to boil and discard foam that rises to the surface. Add remaining ingredients and simmer with cover ajar for 40-45 minutes until chicken is cooked. Transfer chicken to a colander over a bowl and when cool enough to handle pull away the meat in substantial pieces being careful to remove all fat, sinew and gristle. Return bones, fat and trimmings to the broth in the pot and continue to simmer with cover ajar for 2 2 1/2 hours. Strain broth and set aside.
- 2. Meanwhile, warm oil in another saucepan or large 'skillet and saute the onions and garlic for 2-3 minutes. Add scallions, carrots and celery and saute, stirring occasionally for 5 minutes longer. Add the mushrooms, cook slowly for an additional 5-6 minutes, stirring the vegetable mixture occasionally. Season to taste with herbs, salt and pepper to taste. Set aside to cool.
- 3. When broth is ready, prepare the white sauce. Melt butter in a medium-saucepan and add the flour all at once. Cook over low heat for 1-2 minutes to cook the flour. Add the broth and bring to a boil, stirring continuously until the mixture thickens, about 7-8 minutes. Add the cream, if using, and stir for another 2-3 minutes. Remove from heat and cool.

- 4. Combine cooled vegetables with chicken meat and season with salt and pepper to taste. Place in a lightly buttered 6-7 quart baking dish and pour over the white sauce. Stir to distribute the ingredients evenly. Prepare up to one day ahead, cover with plastic wrap and refrigerate.
- 5. When ready to serve bring the pie to room temperature then cover with the biscuit topping. Bake in a preheated 425 degree oven for 15 minutes then reduce oven heat to 350 degrees and bake for 20 minutes longer.

THE HERB BISCUIT CRUST

Just stir the simple biscuit crust in a bowl and prepare up to one day ahead.

- 2 cups all-purpose flour
- 1 tablespoon baking powder
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 unsalted butter, cut into pieces
- 3/4 cup milk
- 1/4 cup chopped flat-leaf Italian parsley
- 1. Sift the flour into a large bowl with the baking powder and salt. Make a well in the center and add the pieces of butter. With fingertips rub the mixture until it forms fine crumbs, lifting to aerate it. Make a well in the center and add the milk, drawing the liquid into the flour with a fork, just until it comes together. Turn onto a lightly floured board and knead for just a few seconds until smooth. Be careful not to overwork the dough or it will be tough.
- 2. When ready to use the biscuit dough, place a sheet of wax paper over it and roll out on a lightly floured surface. Transfer to a flat cookie sheet and refrigerate for 30 minutes or overnight, covered with plastic wrap.
- 3. When ready to use cut into rounds with a 2 1/2-3-inch cookie cutter. Pat out the trimmings if necessary to cut additional rounds. Place the biscuit rounds over the chicken pie, closely together. Bake as above.

Interiors & EXTERIORS EAST END FARMING WITH JOE GERGELA

You may have heard about recently proposed legislation extending the Central Pine Barrens regulatory scheme to the South Fork, which is now being considered by the Central Pine Barrens Advisory Committee, on which I sit. Such a regulatory scheme is unworkable in this vastly different area. It is important to understand that the Long Island Farm Bureau enthusiastically supports groundwater protection and the preservation of critical watershed properties. We do believe, however, that there is a better way to accomplish this.

A much more effective and practical solution would be to identify, up front, the critical parcels for acquisition and secure funding for their purchase without creating a regional superagency, which would be the case if the Central Pine Barrens scheme were extended. Once critical parcels are identified, the total acreage and approximate values should be established so that the effort to secure funding can be undertaken immediately. In 1995, the year the present Central Pine Barrens legislation was enacted, Community Preservation Fund legislation had not yet been adopted by the State of New York. Such a plan to acquire a large number of the priority parcels can no longer be deemed naïve. The Towns of Southampton and East Hampton have collected over $11 million in Community Preservation Funds since April of 1999. On an annualized basis, this amounts to approximately $14 million. If these receipts were to continue without increase for the next ten years, this income stream could purchase over $100 million of land to protect the watershed on the South Fork over the course of the next year. One hundred million dollars will buy thousands of acres of watershed property.

The currently proposed plan would allow the Pine Barrens Commission to regulate farming on Long Island, adding to the strict regulations issued by the NYS Department of Agriculture that are currently in effect. The legislation and Plan, as proposed, would also duplicate existing laws and regulations. Such a mandate would put out of business many or most of the existing should be taken with public knowledge and support. farms on the South Fork, since their cost of production would become much higher than that of farms on the North Fork, the rest of Long Island and the State. Ultimately, these provisions would accelerate the development of farmland rather than slow it down.

An interesting feature of the proposed legislation is the establishment among its goals of the management of cultural resources and restoration of historic structures. What relationship do these resources and structures have to groundwater preservation? It appears that the real intent of the legislation is to supercede local control and zoning by transferring such powers to a regional superagency. East Hampton and Southampton would each have one vote on the six-member commission. Lastly, the DEC Commissioner has ruled that he can veto decisions of the commission. Therefore, in fact, Albany would be in control. I find it unlikely that usurpation of local control will be accepted by South Fork residents and their elected officials

LIFB believes that, instead of the South Fork Pine Barrens superagency, all efforts should immediately be aimed at quickly acquiring prime watershed parcels with the $100 million in Community Preservation Funds available. If, after that acquisition program is concluded, there is further need to create a regional superagency, the issue can be revisited. We also believe that any action

All of us who reside here want to protect our environment and our farmlands, but let us do what is fair, reasonable, achievable and in consensus. Right now, there is now consensus on how to proceed

Podell Haven Helps Children

Family and Children's Podell Haven, a residential facility located in East Hampton which provides safe, temporary shelter for runaway and homeless youth, has established an "After Care" program for former clients. Designed to assist former residents, the "After Care' program provides a variety of follow-up services such as help with long-term housing needs, health care referrals, and long-term technical training. "We want to continue to meet with past residents; to discuss their issues and offer assistance," said Family and Children's Podell Haven day counselor Roger Foster. "Over the course of the past three years we have served more than 200 young people. We're anxious to see how they are getting on with their lives, if we can help them continue on their road to self-sufficiency."

Established in 1996, Podell Haven provides short-term emergency housing for youths up to age 21, crisis and supportive counseling on an individual and group basis, case management and family mediation services, vocational, educational, medical and mental health assistance. It is certified by the New York State Division for Youth and its services are provided in accordance with the New York State Runaway and Homeless Youth Act. Family and Children's Association, an acknowledged "expert" on runaway, homeless youth, has more than 15 years of experience running similar shelters on Long Island and is the only agency on Long Island that runs comprehensive runaway, homeless youth programs providing counseling, housing, case management, job training, etc.

Youth who are provided housing at Podell Haven actively plan with staff in addressing their immediate problems, as well fifty integrated social service programs, please call (516) as their long-term goals. They maintain daily responsibilities such as chores, curfews, work and/or school. Youth, parents, professionals or a family member may call Podell Haven at (516) 329-6109 to speak with a counselor or request emergency housing. "Podell Haven provides a warm shelter and guidance to boys and girls lost in the storm," said Family and Children's Association president and CEO Richard P. Dina. "Trained mediators help heal the wounds between them and their parents whenever possible.'

Podell Haven is partially funded by the Towns of East Hampton and Southampton and is supported by the East End Committee and Friends of Podell Haven.

Family and Children's Association, a member agency of the Garden City and Manhasset community funds and the Port Washington community chest, has served the people of Nassau and Suffolk counties for more than a century, touching 50,000 lives each year. POLICE BLOTTER

The yellow mechanical horse, which sat patiently in front of Cromer's Market on Noyac Road in Noyac and selflessly provided an untold amount of children with rides (as long as mom or dad gave it a quarter), was stolen on January 30 by unknown rustlers. The stolen steed is valued at $1,000.

A dumbbell was tossed through a window at Wolfie's Tavern on Fort Pond Road in Springs. Nobody was hurt, but a replacement window will cost $500.

Somebody really didn't want to go to the DMV. Gregory Johnson left his Mercedes at Kalabacher's Auto Repair in Springs last Friday. When he returned both of his license plates were missing.

Butler's Antiques in Water Mill reported the theft of an antique doll's head worth $125. Police have no leads on the criminal with the cranium.

Vandals playing mailbox baseball hit a home run with Adam Sender's mailbox on January 31. The vandals struck out with all of the other boxes on Noyac Path, over a dozen in all, leaving them all as no-hitters.

Somebody ran off, or rather slowly walked away, with a set of cement planters from Julia Menocal's home on Lumber Lane in Bridgehampton. They also wisked away a pair of wicker chairs. The stolen items are valued at $300.

According to the caretaker of a home on Mitchell's Lane in Bridgehampton, someone entered the home and turned off the heat, thus causing the pipes to freeze and burst. The house, currently owned by Happy Equities, sustained $20,000 in damage.

Perhaps the same person entered the home of an East Quogue woman and turned on the stove. According to the aforementioned woman, while she was out, an intruder forced open the front door and turned on the burner of her electric stove. The plastic handle of a skillet partially melted and caught fire. The small inferno traveled up the wall and burned a cabinet before burning out on its own. Police have no suspects.

An up-island man was charged with fourth degree criminal mischief after he allegedly punched a sign at the 7-Eleven in Cutchogue. Joseph Consiglio of Selden, apparently upset at not winning, again, reportedly knocked over a sign promoting the New York State Lottery. The sign fell on the lottery machine, rendering it non-functional.

Chaos broke out in Peconic when a tow truck stopped for gas at the Amoco on Route 48. Apparently, the car on the hook was left running and somehow slipped into reverse. The towee then became detached from the tow-er, backed itself out into traffic, across Route 48, into the median where it made a U-turn, back across the east-bound lanes and into a parked car. No one was injured as there were no drivers in either car, and fortunately nobody was traveling east on Route 48.

Dan's LETTERS

LIONS AND TIGERS AND BEARS, OH MY! Dear Dan.

I just read the article about releasing lions in North Haven to reduce the deer population! Is this true? The people living in North Haven would honestly prefer lions roaming around and having to stay in their houses for three weeks than to have hunters come and reduce the deer population? They would be able to provide food donations for hunters for the hungry as well as their own families. It seems like the lions would put the community in serious jeopardy! Please tell me that this article is a joke or a hoax.

Anne Defilippis Ronkonkoma

- It's a hoax

HOI POLLOI?

Dear Dan,

What are you, a society rag where we get to read where the hoi polloi have dinner each week, or are you a serious journalistic newspaper informing local and out towners of the various issues facing us on the East End, or are you a comedy publication like Mad magazine?

There are a lot of people out here who aren't exactly sure where you are coming from with your "editorials." I think there are a lot of people, call them square or uninformed who might take you seriously. I heard that several elderly, and not so elderly residents of North Haven were a might upset with your "Roar" editorial in the Feb. 4 issue. During the famous War of the Worlds broadcast many years ago, even Orson Welles had a disclaimer before the broadcast making sure people knew that it was a hoax. Failing that, how about an apology to the folks who were upset by your editorial?

Joe Lauro Shelter Island

-Sorry if I upset anyone with the North Haven lion hoax. It was intended to be fun. Dan

A NEW APPROACH

Dear Dan,

I was exhilarated at the thought of wildlife roaming around loose. I now know that North Haven had passed an ordinance not allowing the "lions" out. They had to be sent back home to Africa.

Hans Van der Klerk, still obsessed with his need to protect his North Haven, agreed to a new approach. His land would be turned into a weekend shooting estate. The land was mapped into grids and a mock safari camp would be set up. Only ten people per weekend and the grids were divided out accordingly. Gun handlers and trackers would be brought in and assigned to the guests.

There would be no waste. The game would, when prepared properly, provide food for thousands of people

The wine and spirits of highest quality would be stocked and only wild game was to be served at dinner.

Construction has begun and Van der Klerk has applied for a permit allowing his land to be converted to a temporary shooting estate.

Reservations are now being accepted.

V.V.

LIVING THE AMERICAN DREAM Dear Dan.

Diania Kly's America bashing letter deserves a reply. It is truly sad that to make her point about how much misery she claims exists in the USA, the best Ms. Kly can do is to cite some obscure former Soviet dissident with his eighty pages of citations. Anyone can come up with a bunch of unfortunates or malcontents to list their grievances. No country, not even the USA, is perfect. But to use this source as proof that misery stalks the land is ludicrous. With its low inflation and very low unemployment rate, the USA is the envy of the rest of the world. Proof of this are the millions of people who would do almost anything, including in some cases risking their lives, to come here and become part of the American dream.

I.V. de Chellis New York NY

Goodbye, Charlie Brown

Sunday evening I was upstairs writing, while my father was downstairs watching television. I could hear the familiar "tick tick tick" as 60 Minutes came on. I heard Mike Wallace mention the name Charles Schulz, and I thought to myself: the man announced his retirement over a month ago, and 60 Minutes is just getting around to covering it now. Well, Wallace wasn't talking about Schulz's retirement. After drawing Peanuts for almost fifty years, Charles Schulz died Saturday night at the age of seventy seven. After announcing his retirement in January, his last strip ran the morning of Sunday, February 13, hours after his death.

My father took the news rather well, considering he is probably one of the biggest Peanuts fans around. He has, hanging on the wall of his living room, an original autographed drawing of Charlie Brown. My aunt got him the autograph when she met Schulz in the sixties.

She asked for an autograph for her little brother. He asked her how old her little brother was. She replied, "twenty-six."

When I toured northern California three years ago with my father, he insisted that we stop in Santa Rosa to visit Schulz's ice skating rink. We waited around for an hour or so, but he never showed up. The rink has a nice gift shop though. I bought a Snoopy tie, but he bought a full sized Peanuts story board, which hangs next to his original signed Charlie Brown.

Unlike many cartoonists,

Schulz wrote solo, without any script writer or assistant. His family has requested that Peanuts not be continued by another artist, so with the death of Charles Schulz, we also mourn the loss of Charlie Brown, Snoopy, Linus and the rest of the Peanuts Gang. They will be sorely missed
